PORCELLIAN CLUB
CENTENNIAL
1791—1891

CAMBRIDGE
Printed at the Riverside Press

PREFATORY

THE new building which, at the meeting held in February, 1890, it was decided to erect has been completed, and is now occupied by the Club. During the period of construction, temporary quarters were secured at 414 Harvard Street. The new building stands upon the site of the old building which the Club had occupied since the year 1833. In order to celebrate in an appropriate manner the completion of the work and the Centennial Anniversary of the Founding of the Porcellian Club, a committee, consisting of the Building Committee and the officers of the Club, was chosen. February 21, 1891, was selected as the date, and it was decided to have the Annual Meeting and certain Literary Exercises commemorative of the occasion precede the Dinner. The Committee has prepared this volume containing the Literary Exercises, a brief account of the Dinner, and a catalogue of the members of the Club to date. A full account of the Annual Meeting and the Dinner may be found in the Club records.

The thanks of the Committee and of the Club are due to Brothers Honorary Sargent, Isham, and Chapman for their contribution towards the success of the Literary Exercises; also to Brother Honorary Hazeltine for his interest in preparing the plates for the memorial programme; also to Brother Honorary Painter for revising the Club Catalogue.

PORCELLIAN CLUB

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

FOUNDED 1791

by the light of the Moon

Cambridge
• 1891 •

The image is a highly decorative Art Nouveau-style poster for the Porcellian Club's centennial celebration. It features a central arched window showing a historical scene of men in 18th-century clothing gathered around a table. The entire scene is framed by intricate, symmetrical scrollwork and floral patterns. Text elements are integrated into the design: 'PORCELLIAN CLUB' is written across a banner at the top; 'CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION' is split across two banners on either side of the central window; 'FOUNDED 1791' is enclosed in circular medallions on the left and right sides; and 'Cambridge • 1891 •' is written on a large banner at the bottom. A small caption 'by the light of the Moon' is placed below the central illustration.

A SONG OF OTHER DAYS.

As o'er the glacier's frozen sheet
Breathes soft the Alpine rose,
So, through life's desert springing sweet,
The flower of friendship grows;
And as, where'er the roses grow,
Some rain or dew descends,
'Tis nature's law that wine should flow
To wet the lips of friends.
Then once again, before we part,
My empty glass shall ring;
And he that has the warmest heart
Shall loudest laugh and sing.

They say we were not born to eat;
But gray-haired sages think
It means, — Be moderate in your meat,
And partly live to drink;
For baser tribes the rivers flow
That know not wine or song;
Man wants but little drink below,
But wants that little strong.
Then once again, etc.

If one bright drop is like the gem
That decks a monarch's crown,
One goblet holds a diadem
Of rubies melted down!
A fig for Cæsar's blazing brow,
But, like the Egyptian queen,
Bid each dissolving jewel glow
My thirsty lips between.
Then once again, etc.

The Grecian's mound, the Roman's urn,
Are silent when we call,
Yet still the purple grapes return

To cluster on the wall;
It was a bright Immortal's head
They circled with the vine,
And o'er their best and bravest dead
They poured the dark-red wine.
Then once again, etc.

Methinks o'er every sparkling glass
Young Eros waves his wings,
And echoes o'er its dimples pass
From dead Anacreon's strings;
And, tossing round its beaded brim
Their locks of floating gold,
With bacchant dance and choral hymn
Return the nymphs of old.
Then once again, etc.

A welcome then to joy and mirth,
From hearts as fresh as ours,
To scatter o'er the dust of earth
Their sweetly mingled flowers:
'T is Wisdom's self the cup that fills
In spite of Folly's frown,
And Nature, from her vine-clad hills,
That rains her life-blood down!
Then once again, before we part,
My empty glass shall ring;
And he that has the warmest heart
Shall loudest laugh and sing.

"DUM VIVIMUS VIVAMUS."

I.
In old days of glory —
So I have heard the story —
When true hearts were many
And false hearts were few,
Libations crowned with flowers
They poured out to the powers,
To bless their mortal hours
Each day anew.

II.
Put we need no roses,
The wine to us discloses
A flower more precious
That blooms in the bowl.
And no man e'er shall blame us
That brothers here we name us:
Dum vivimus vivamus
With heart and soul.

III.
When these days are no longer
Our memory 'll grow the stronger,
To it we shall hearken
As through the world we roll;
Its voice we cannot smother,
And when we meet a brother
We'll drink to one another
With heart and soul.

HISTORY OF THE CLUB

BY BRO. HON. CHARLES ISHAM, '76

BROTHER GRAND AND BROTHERS :

The Porcellian Club, as it flourishes to-day, is the rare survival of generous sentiments, so personal in their nature that they might seem of necessity confined to the lives of contemporaries, and to be of a delicacy incapable of transmission in their purity throughout the changes of a century.

Yet, knowing that we have received these excellent gifts, unimpaired and ever fresh from the hearts of our predecessors, we may learn from our records that not to chance or to the infusion of any alloy is due their abundant vitality among us.

In the year 1789, and doubtless for some time previously, there existed in Harvard College an organization called by its members The Argonauts, and sufficiently formal to meet every alternate week for the enjoyment of an impromptu supper. A former historian of the Club, who, presumably, was himself an argonaut, has left us an elaborate essay to prove that the lineal descendants of Jason's companions were then to be found in Cambridge rather than in Colchis ; but there is evidence that his argument was not intended to be convincing, and we certainly are more fortunate in the character of Joseph McKean, who in 1791 entered the College, and was almost immediately received into this band of Grecians.

“To be famous when one is young,” it has been said, “is the privilege of the gods,” and surely no youth of whom the Harvard Annals tell us united in juster proportion the qualities of manliness and amiability that inspired our Honored Founder. How quickly and willingly his influence was recognized is shown by his creation of this Fraternity, under the title of “The Pig Club,” in the year 1791, when it fell to him in turn to offer an entertainment to The Argonauts, at which he presided and furnished the table with a young pig, roasted whole, that he had with infinite dexterity concealed in his room until it was fit to sacrifice upon the altar of Conviviality. Some of the votes, though none of the records, of “The Pig Club” have come down to us. If ever written, they were probably few in number, since, in the course of the following year, the name was changed to that of “The Gentleman’s Society,” and, at the same time, a Grand Marshal and a Deputy were elected from the Senior Class and a Corresponding and Recording Secretary from the Juniors, individually and collectively to exercise their authority in accordance with a set of rules, exceedingly brief, and introduced by a preamble, explaining that, “Whereas the multiplication of laws tends to weaken their force, we, despising the metaphysics which teach that the principles of order and good nature are not innate, and proposing by our future actions to demonstrate that they are, leave the regulation of his conduct to the good sense of each individual.”

Joseph McKean, being ineligible for the higher offices, was made the Secretary, and Charles Cutler the Grand Marshal. The latter resigned upon graduation; and the former thereupon succeeded him, continuing preëminently influential in shaping the brilliant Destiny of the Club until 1798, when he declined reëlection, having ordered its Government, determined its Policy, and imbued it with his personality, as we believe, for many hundred years.

During the administration of Joseph McKean, it was resolved that thereafter the Grand Marshal should be chosen from among the Graduate Honoraries. Immediate membership was confined to the three upper classes. Sociability, Brotherly Affection and Generosity, Liberality and Courtesy, were invoked as our principles; and, to disarm mistaken criticism, it was voted, in July of 1794, "that this Fraternity be denominated the Porcellian Club," and that a silver seal, still in our archives, be struck to commemorate a name long to be held in dignity and honor.

Our affectionate admiration could dwell on the commanding physique and intellectual graces of our Founder, or recount his daring yet innocent escapades. He was truly the embodiment of strength and activity and of refined and wholesome mirth, opposed to license and to every form of over indulgence. Within two years after he had quitted the Grand Marshal's chair he received the tribute of a toast, familiar to all Porcellians, and his gracious figure appeared at the Anniversary table in 1805 to invoke a benediction; for, following the dictates of his conscience and humanity, he had become a minister of the Congregational church.

But it remains to indicate how well his successors understood the importance of adhering to the standard of his work; nor was this accomplished without trial. Indeed, before our Fraternity was forty years old, the Brothers had not merely rejected a series of propositions insidiously calculated to rob us of our distinction, but they had also confirmed the original, simple purpose in a manner to withstand all later and harmful attempts at innovation.

The members assembled in each other's rooms for private entertainments and the unaffected play of wit and kindly feeling. The Secretary had the custody of the Club property, and in his room meetings for the transaction of business were generally held in response to notices posted on the door of the College Chapel. Public festivities, in the sense that the Public witnessed the procession of Porcellians from the room used as a rendezvous to the place of entertainment, were voted from time to time, and a preference was shown for the resources of Porter's Tavern in Brighton Street, just out of Harvard Square.

The Anniversary Meeting was presently set for the day of the Autumnal Exhibition, when a Grand Marshal was chosen from the Fraternity at large, and on the second Thursday in June members were elected from the Sophomore Class, and a Deputy from the Juniors. In February of the year 1800, it was moved and carried that some badge be designed "expressive of Unanimity, Liberality, and Friendship;" and before the end of the month the heart-shaped medal was adopted, to be worn suspended from the neck by ribbons of green and white, the colors to be replaced by black should Death enter the circle of the Brothers Immediate.

At the beginning of the century the Club possessed some fourscore Brothers Honorary. Already the interest and enjoyment of all stated meetings was rated in proportion to their attendance. Happily, they resided, with scarcely an exception, in Boston or in the vicinity of Cambridge, and were thus enabled to take part frequently in the pleasantest reunions, and to gratify a desire to share the intimacy of their most recent exponents. Had the question been asked then, or were it to be asked now, To what circumstance, above all others, should be attributed the prosperity, and, perhaps, the existence, of the Club?

the answer would have been, and is, To the sympathy and coöperation of the Honorary Members, to their prudent advice and their ready generosity. In a thousand ways they have invited and retained the confidence of their younger Brethren, and the attachments of both, inextricably knit around the parent stock, are the pledges of its continuing vigor and beauty.

The first mention of a book, the property of the Club, relates to a "Musical miscellany for the encouragement of Vocalists." A desire to form a library had, however, previously been expressed, and in April, 1803, it was formally begun with Brother Samuel Kirkland's presentation of Young's "Travels in France" and Cowper's "Task." The Librarianship was to be held by a Senior, and Joseph Sprague was first chosen to this most responsible office.

At its inception the Library increased by gifts, averaging fifty volumes a year. It contains at present over ten thousand books, and is exceedingly valuable from its many handsome specimens of printing and binding, yet, especially, as a monument of instinctive preference in every department of Literature. The first catalogue was published in 1816, and successive editions have marked the growth of the collection. The majority of our by-laws relate to the use and maintenance of the Library; and the small membership of the Club has proved an important factor of constant gains and comparatively inconsiderable losses.

In the minutes of our business meetings we trace the suppression of tendencies peculiar to society in general one hundred years ago, but gradually perceived to form no part of our identity. A certain ostentation we once shared with the world around us. The badge of the Club was much oftener worn, and Porcellian processions, headed by music, marched to points remote to dine and return with the same or greater ceremony. The efforts of the members to secure a local habitation were hastened through their inclination for less publicity; and, when once enjoying their own room, processions soon ceased, and as early as 1821 further decoration than the medal was prohibited, and the occasions considered proper for its display were carefully limited.

The incompatibility of chapters, dependent on a club absolutely identified with its surroundings and the individuality of its members, did not prevent a serious discussion of this matter in "the Thirties," when a zeal for extension prevailed among Greek-letter societies. The temptation was, however, overcome by the reflection that concentration was of the essence of the Club Spirit, although others might imitate our example in the hope of increasing the measure of their happiness. On the other hand, several college organizations of the Past, before deciding in the negative the significant question, "Is life worth living?" have confided to our keeping their papers and relics, thus securing for themselves a posthumous immortality.

The reinforcement of the Club by the admission of "The Knights of the Square Table," in 1831, was a fortunate conjunction, because the objects of each were similar, and the membership of both had well-nigh converged.

The Committee on behalf of the Porcellians invited complete amalgamation, on condition that their title be accepted to include the Knights; and this having been agreed to, the union was consummated, and the present star-shaped medal adopted. The names of the Knights appeared in the catalogues as members of both clubs, and the second executive officer was rechristened "the Deputy Master," — an anomaly that was subsequently recognized, and a return to the older form authorized by vote.

It was now evident that the augmented property of the Club required better housing and protection against the risks of removals and possibly of eviction; for we were then the tenants, vicariously, of the College, and could not always count upon the benevolence of the authorities. Whatever the Club owned had been, nevertheless, well regulated, notably since 1820, when the present distribution of officers was made among the classes, and Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, the Secretary, assisted by Hilary Breton Cenas, the Librarian, devised methods of order that are still worthy of imitation; and to the former the Club is furthermore greatly indebted for the "New Code" of 1821.

Stoughton 28 was then occupied by the Librarians, and piled high with the Club's effects; accordingly, the contributions of the Knights raised an immensa indigestaque mola that seemed to baffle all ingenuity of arrangement. Besides, the room was not assigned by the College to a Librarian, ex officio; consequently, a Brother was sometimes chosen to the office perforce, if he happened to draw the number, which every Porcellian set at the head of his list to insure its retention "in the family."

Admonished by these circumstances, and compelled to the selection of a suitable domicile, a committee was appointed, and, after mature deliberation, the "Long Room" in the Athenæum Building, standing, until within the past few months, upon this site, was rented and furnished.

The last meeting in the Librarians' room was adequately celebrated on the 22d of May, 1833; and on the 6th of June the Brethren, in joyful array, proceeded to admire the bewildering evidences of the taste and foresight displayed in the preparation of their new quarters. Step by step they have advanced to the acquisition of the land and building, and, habitually conservative, they waited throughout fifty-three years of tenancy, in whole or in part, before purchasing this property.

As we praise, this evening, the architectural appropriateness of our present home, and the skill that has combined the charm of the old with the convenience and durability of the new, we can turn to the page of the Secretary of 1833, glowing with the enthusiasm of a former auspicious occasion, and read his opinion that the ancient "Long Room" was "sufficiently genteel for the reception of the most celebrated clubs of London or Paris."

Another gratifying result of the union of the Porcellians and the Knights was the Address of the Deputy; nor does it seem advisable, in this instance, to alter either the conception or form of the original. In the earlier days, the Initiatee, upon election, was without delay presented to the company, and welcomed by every Deputy after a formula of his own premeditation; the Secretaries, in their notes, often reproducing from memory several of the felicitous sentences. These were collated by Brother Heyward in 1806, and copied more than once in the Records, but merely as suggestions to the Deputies, and to those appointed yearly to deliver a "Charge" and a poem for the instruction of the Club in the precepts of our Founder.

With the appearance of the present Address, in 1834, the poem and "Charge" were in turn discontinued. Set verse and speech seldom have place in our inclosure, which has always been kept a pasture and recreation ground of the intellect, and not an arid and strenuous arena. Moreover, we may be allowed to believe that no exposition of Porcellian doctrine can surpass the lucidity and elegance of the epitome that then came to us by inheritance.

The range of eligibility for election is with us, theoretically, very wide; although, to secure perfect cordiality, our circle cannot expand beyond the limit of our unhesitating confidence and unanimous choice.

The proposal to confine Honorary Membership to graduates of the College was rejected in 1830, and again, in 1832, all University students residing in Cambridge and under observation during a year and a half were declared to be eligible; but it was not thought permissible to sanction the election of any one whose qualifications, before graduation, were concealed from his own college generation. Latterly, even a superficial acquaintance with all undergraduates is manifestly unattainable; yet, until it is demonstrated that the utmost sincerity is less than should be offered to a chosen friend, we ought to have no misgivings and few regrets. The impulses of ingenuous youth are not infallible. We are expressly warned that for them we will be held to account; but, in this place, we may trust them beyond the worldly leaven of maturity, or the precocity that fain would imitate it.

Fifteen years ago, our ex-Grand Marshal and Trustee, Augustus Thorndike Perkins, concluded an admirable sketch of the Club¹ with an enumeration of some who have gone from our midst to achieve a fame, not confined to their nationality, in Literature, Science, Art, Theology, Law, and Statesmanship, and it is our greatest satisfaction to know that the bearer of every illustrious name became a Porcellian by virtue of our quaint axiom that so significantly commends "the Feelings of a Man" before passing to "the Powers of a Scholar."

Once in our history our principles of selection were openly assailed. Members of the Junior Class appeared, on Exhibition Day of 1824, wearing a facsimile of our insignia, which they claimed to respect, and by appealing to the Public attempted to draw us into a discussion. The Club, however, ignored the provocation to exchange shouts with the Cyclops, whose aims and vision were alike defective, and won the commendation of the Honorary Members by submitting to them the Records and Memoranda treating of the incident that caused the hostile demonstration.

The Spaniard, weakened by age, sought the Fountain of Youth under southern skies, in a climate where mildness savors of decay. Our Fountain attracted us when, as yet untried, we were preparing for achievement. Its surroundings are bright with the fairness of Health; and its waters, taken at the source, fortify against enervation and despondency.

Our Founder did not pretend to solve for us the gravest or highest problems of life, but he has encouraged us to meet them unselfishly and cheerfully. If this temper accompanies us to the end, and distinguishes between success and failure; if those who have learned its value are more apt than others to prefer the best and accomplish the most, then the Club is justified of the Brethren as well as of our anonymous poet, who has sung: —

“ Here ’s a health to our Founder, McKean,
 That man of immaculate Fame,
 Whose heart was so big,
 Who nourished a pig,
 And gave us our time-honored name.
 Here ’s a health to the Merry and Wise,
 To Youth that is steadfast and true,
 To those who supported the Club and its cause,
 And whose spirit is living in you.”

ODE BY BRO. HON. JOHN O. SARGENT, '30

READ BY THE GRAND MARSHAL

I.

LIVE while we live! Our fathers heard
The ripple at the fountain's head —
By rushing waves our hearts are stirred,
Now that a hundred years have fled.

II.

They lived in simplest fellowship,
Content on one crisp roast to dine ;
When Porter spiced and mulled their flip,
And Medford vaults matured their wine.

III.

They did not spare the midnight oil,
They dug their share of Hebrew roots,
But sought to mingle sport with toil,
Play with the flowers and pluck the fruits.

IV.

The fruits! Mark on our living list,
Or on the scroll that Death has starr'd,
The chrysalid deipnosophist
Turn jurist, statesman, sculptor, bard.

V.

Our Allston strove for Raphael's fame,
Our Channing taught that God is Love ;
Leaps to our lips how many a name
Of Brothers with us — or above!

VI.

Come to the front! our patriarch band,
 Furness and Winthrop, Lowell, Holmes,
 While over seas we stretch the hand
 To Story — Art's delight and Rome's.

VII.

Live all the spring-tide hours of youth,
 Live all you may in waning age,
 Hold fast by Honor, Friendship, Truth,
 And tireless war with Falsehood wage.

VIII.

Work! for dear Alma Mater's sake,
 Indulge her too in every whim,
 And all her Athlete courses take,
 With no base care for life or limb.

IX.

Alive to Duty! shun the bog
 Of bigot zeal and party hate,
 Nor dare transgress the Decalogue
 Though Senates deem it out of date.

X.

Proud of the Nation — ever be
 Obedient to her sovereign will;
 Rule as she may from sea to sea,
 HOME is the freeman's fortress still.

XI.

There Woman reigns — her facile sway
 Will now persuade and now perplex;
 One lady-love the young obey,
 The old admire and love — the Sex.

XII.

Two crystal rills run side by side,
So near — that each with each unites ;
Thus blended in a social tide,
Porcellians mingled with the Knights.

XIII.

Muse, on their Medal's dual face,
Themes for a sermon or a song ;
Dear Brothers, I entreat your grace,
If I have read its legends wrong.

POEM BY BRO. HON. H. G. CHAPMAN, '83

HERE at the mile-post of a hundred years
We open these wide doors that swing across
The threshold of our second century.
Welcome to your new home, ye that belong
To this renowned Porcellian Brotherhood ;
Here to renew by hand and voice and eye
The unseverable ties that all have wound
About their lives, who in the onward course
Of this last hundred years have met a while,
And journeyed in each other's company.

For where in all the world but here
Should truest friendship have its birth ?
Where naught of any was to fear,
Each trusting in the other's worth.

And if, with freedom grown too free,
Some oats were somewhat wildly sown,
Our sins were public property,
The worst there was to know was known.

Nor was it then to meet an hour
And part a year, for other's sake,
Old Time himself was in our power,
And wrought the chains he cannot break.

Wrought them from golden beams of sun
Of some long summer afternoon
That fell in reach, when it was done,
At evening of a day in June.

Wrought them the while, of a storm-swept day,
 With our books or beer and our pipes aglow,
 We watched from the fire the winds at play
 With the old year's leaves or the new year's snow.

Wrought them through many a famous night,
 Summer or winter, as chance might be,
 When the old walls shook and the floors took fright
 At the sound of Porcellian revelry.

Into the strands of our life are woven
 Scraps of saying and shreds of song ;
 And who could have told, had it not been proven,
 So strange a fetter should be so strong.

But as we grasp each other's living hands,
 What do I hear without? Who's he that stands,
 With powdered wig and breeches to the knee,
 There by the door? What wonderment I see
 Upon his face and in his restless eye,
 That seeks to recognize this company!
 What if he know us not! — do we not know him?
 Look in the Catalogue — does it not show him
LL. D., Mr., Rhet. et Orat. Prof.,
Boylston and S. H. S., G. M.? — Enough!
 Not know him yet? I see your eyes grow rounder.
 Joseph McKean it is, Our Honored Founder.
 Make room, make room! and give the master place!
 Make room, make room! that we may see his face,
 Whose fame a thousand sons have boasted,
 Whose name a hundred classes toasted!
 Speak! speak! And as a silence falls at last
 Our ancient guest speaks to us from the past:

“Gentlemen — Brothers, if you call you so:
 'T was thus we spoke a hundred years ago —
 When I was ushered in, you may have seen

I was much ta'en aback, and deemed I'd been
 Mised, or in some manner misdirected
 To a strange house, where I was not expected ;
 But now, from your kind welcome, I perceive
 That I was right ; yet how could I believe
 That such a goodly fellowship had grown
 Out of the little seed that I had sown ;
 How in this palace see our student's nook,
 This library — our shelf without a book !
 How could I know, who neither knew a name
 Nor yet a face, that this was still the same
 Porcellian Club to-day that was begun
 So modestly by us in '91 !
 But as I stood among you in the throng,
 Ere you caught sight of me, it was not long
 Before I saw that, though the change was great
 In many things, this luxury and state
 Instead of our bare rooms, and last, not least,
 These indications of a splendid feast
 For which you are preparing here instead
 Of our plain fare, (although I hear it said
 You still serve up the sucking pig, and greet him
 With honor, though you may not care to eat him,) —
 Saw, that in spite of all the innovations
 That time must bring in many generations,
 One thing remained, one thing that you inherit
 Unchanged, undimmed, the true Porcellian spirit.
 This is well done ; keep it and hand it on
 Unchanged, undimmed, till 1991.
 And while you do, my ghostly promise hear
 To visit you one night each hundredth year
 Henceforth forever. So to-night I'll stay
 And dine with you, nor leave till break of day ;
 For now I see, the while I have been striving
 To reassure me, others were arriving,
 And I myself shall presently renew
 Some early friendship here, as well as you."

Yes, of this celebration it cannot be said
 We've remembered the quick, but forgotten the dead ;
 For you see the Committee has sent invitations
 To the ghosts of Porcellians of all generations,
 And I fancy, unless I'm mistaken, you'll find
 That there is n't a soul of them all that's declined.
 And, Brothers, indeed it's a splendid array
 Of famous old fellows we'll have here to-day.
 One would almost imagine, at seeing them all,
 That we'd opened America's Pantheon Hall.
 You know them by name, but I doubt if their faces
 Are quite as familiar ; and then there are traces
 Of a fading or dimness, that often appears
 When a man's been a ghost for a number of years.
 What if people are wont to regard with severity
 Those who hand their own ancestors down to posterity !
 I'm going to present them ; I'll warrant you then
 That you'll never fight shy of good spirits again.

And first, Joseph Story, our Judge and our Jurist,
 The soundest, the wisest, the ablest, the purest —
 But there is n't an adjunct expressive of glory
 Whose superlative has n't been fastened to Story.
 One would surely have thought that the quota of praise
 In available use by the men of those days
 Had all been applied to this marvel of men.
 Not a bit, for we find that as much more again
 Was freely and fairly bestowed on another,
 William Ellery Channing, his classmate and brother.

Next, Washington Allston, so modestly famous
 That, if we should let him, he'd certainly blame us
 For paying him even the slightest attention.
 And this, by the way, too, reminds me to mention
 That even in those days the Club was well known
 For admiring itself, and for praising its own ;
 And Allston, while shunning the public, was planning
 To paint or to write something pleasing to Channing.

Here comes Brother Everett, Prometheus unbound,
 And Erasmus with learning perfected and sound,
 With the voice of the Titan to thunder at Zeus,
 But the heart of the scholar to find an excuse ;
 Who for this University broadened his knowledge,
 But gave to the State what he got for the College,
 Save once, when he found a few years he could spare,
 And sat down for a rest in the President's chair.

And here 's Brother Curtis — 't was not very far
 From the place where he stood to the top of the bar ;
 And Binney, our great Pennsylvanian, who sets
 His State on a par with our own Massachusetts :
 Great lawyers, but here is a Brother whose pen
 Has helped to create many eminent men,
 For the lawyers from Maine to New Mexico are sons,
 Or at least sons-in-law, of Theophilus Parsons.

Next comes Brother Prescott, whose exquisite diction
 Throws a halo of truth round a kernel of fiction,
 For many a hall of the beautiful palace he
 Built is upheld by his columns of fallacy.
 Yet cere perennius his books bid defiance
 To the drill of research and the pickaxe of Science,
 That are wielded by diggers whose methods are leading
 To some very good books, that make very poor reading.

And next we have Motley, whose writings they call
 The finest historical novels of all :
 An old-fashioned writer, who did not pursue
 The historical method ; I fancy it 's true,
 That most of us now, when we have any leisure,
 Read Ibsen for facts, and read Motley for pleasure.

But how shall I deal with the next that appear,
 With Charles Francis Adams and Sumner ? — I fear —
 But stay ! one is with us on whom I can call,
 Who shall speak for himself — nay, shall speak for them all.

Let the eulogy come from those eloquent still lips
That never could flatter — I call Wendell Phillips.

(Ghost of Wendell Phillips loquitur.)

“It is no eulogy that I shall seek
To press upon you ; I shall only speak
A word or two that cannot come amiss,
Spoken by me, at such a time as this.
True, many of us here have gained a place
On some historian’s pages, who shall trace
The record of a fight that battered down
Old ties, old friendships. ’T is sad renown
That even in part stands on the overthrow
Of one’s own blood, as ours must stand. I know
There was not one of us that had not joyed
To live unknown, so could he have destroyed
The causes of his fame, to be again
Brothers. Alas! we were not brothers then.
Was I a brother of our Brother Grand
Theodore Lyman, whom I sought to brand
A ‘dainty gentleman,’ as I was branding
His ‘gentleman of property and standing’?
I was myself Grand Marshal of the Club,
Yet I could find it in my heart to dub
‘One of the family’ of our Judge Curtis
‘Upstart attorney’ — surely that must have hurt his Judicial pride ; and then I gave some notice
To Peleg Sprague, and Harrison Gray Otis.
Nor did I, in those days, refrain from scoring
Our Brothers Perkins, Oliver, and Loring,
And Sturgis too, and Jackson, all and each,
For backing up that March the seventh speech.
Therefore this hundred years has not been passed
In perfect peace among us, but at last
Not only has the general peace been sealed,
But, happily, the wounds themselves are healed ;
And once again we gather, as of yore,
Though parted fifty years, brothers once more.

What shall I say for you who took the lead,
 Porcellians, generals, Fitz-Hugh Lee and Meade,
 Who saw and were the utter battle edge
 Of those last days, will you refuse to pledge
 Your Founder's health together here to-day,
 And longer stand apart among us? Nay,
 Meade shall forget his Gettysburg, and Lee
 Forget the spring of eighteen sixty-three;
 All shall forget the very word Rebellion,
 No North, no South, but all of us Porcellian!"

Again your poet speaks: These are not all
 Our famous memories. We must recall
 Dana, whose true renown was floating past
 This generation, 'lashed to a drifting mast,'
 Till Adams threw a fame-preserver to him,
 And saved him 'as he was to those who knew him';
 And old Tom Appleton, whose genial wit
 Has brightened up the nether world a bit;
 And Richardson, who bids me say to you
 That none shall feel the loss of plans he drew
 For cosy libraries, spacious hall,
 For William Peters has outdone them all.
 All these are here to-night, and many others,
 The ghosts of no less memorable Brothers,
 Around our genial hearth are swarming,
 To celebrate our new house-warming.

Those who are dead salute you; they are free
 To vanish if they like not poetry.
 Besides, they're not in any wise to blame
 For adding this to my poetic fame.
 The rest of you will have to stay and bear it;
 You made me write it, and I'll make you hear it.

I find, I confess with much surprise,
 That some of us fail to realize

What a very large part the old Club plays
In the outside world, in these latter days ;
Yet, if you 'll allow me to point it out,
I think you 'll admit that beyond a doubt
Art and science and law and letters
Are all of them hopelessly our debtors.
Find me the best, and his best degree
Is a white pig's head and a green P. C. ;
And in any profession the man at the head 'll
Turn out to be the one who 's explained his medal.
And first the poets. Besides myself
There 's Sargent and Wister to start the shelf,
And one or two others, whose books would show well,
If prettily bound — say Holmes and Lowell.
For he is ours who has cast a spell
That has doomed us forever, wherever we dwell,
Some by adoption and some by birth,
To carry New England round the earth —
Oliver Wendell Holmes, who wrote,
On one occasion, if I may quote,
That " Little of all we value here
Wakes on the morn of its hundredth year
Without both feeling and looking queer."
And yet this morning the Club awoke
As strong as iron, as sound as oak ;
And I think an initiatee could tell
That it never has looked or felt so well.
Ah ! Doctor Holmes, the ' one-hoss shay '
Ran just a hundred years to a day —
Give one more day to the Club, and then
Your moral may be applied again ;
For to-morrow morning the Club, I fear,
May wake both looking and feeling queer.

And Lowell — you cannot suppose I 'd insert him
In that casual manner and promptly desert him —
A poet who wanders from gay to pathetic,
Onomatopoeical, peripatetic.

First touching our hearts as he knows how to do it, he
 Next flashes out with some wild incongruity,
 Making us roar at his smooth ingenuity.
 O father of strange multiverbial rhymes,
 Pray tell us why politics bores us at times,
 When the mind, finding out what an idol it is, shuns
 The goddess that's worshiped by all politicians —
 The Goddess of Fame, and their private ambitions.
 Yet this is a time when we hardly can dodge
 Certain questions presented by one Cabot Lodge,
 Who's fathered and asks us to swallow the Force Bill,
 Like a physical fact or a page of the Gospel.
 Still, those who feel sorry for him, Heaven knows have felt
 Worse at the plight of poor Theodore Roosevelt,
 Who at present's in search of a lecture room where he can
 Lecture without being called 'un-American ;'
 And Perry, whose quasi-magnhominous air
 Has increased with increasing Congressional care,
 Was quite gay when he left us, but now he has grown
 To be sort of a Belmont committee of one.

Now of course I could keep up this qualified praise,
 With the subjects I have, for a number of days,
 But what I have given, I think, will be ample
 As specimens, mounted by way of example,
 Just one out of ten, as you frequently see 'em
 In any well-organized modern museum.
 To be really complete would take several poems ;
 Thus I've mentioned but one of the family Holmes,
 To wit, the Holmes Medico-poeticalis ;
 Though of course there's Holmes Sapiens judicialis —
 The first man of science (for England) to draw
 The lines on which luck has evolved into law.
 I wish, too, I had just a little more time an'
 A little more space for the family Lyman,
 Whose regular blooms are of excellent sort,
 But which once blossomed out with a very rare sport,

Our Great-Great-Grand Marshal, whose sufferings we share,
And who has our best wish when we wish he were here.
But, Brothers, in spite of the marvelous showing
We make as a whole, there is really no knowing
How little each separate man might have done,
If each had engaged in the struggle alone ;
What severe competition and rivalry must
Have occurred, if we never had had a Porc. Trust.
Yet we fear not the courts, nor the next Legislature ;
Our charter 's drawn after the statutes of nature,
A close corporation, whose method is plain —
Get into what 's going, and being in, stay in.
Dum vivimus, while we 're about it, we say ;
Vivamus, let 's do things in shape, and make hay
While the sun shines, a motto that gives us good measure,
For it puts into work what it takes out of pleasure.
And frankly, I think there are plenty of creeds
That fall shorter by far of humanity's needs.
Let 's follow it, then, both in letter and spirit,
And if we don't reach it we 'll come pretty near it,
While year after year this Porcellian fraternity
Sends the Universe booming along to Eternity.

FEBRUARY DINNER

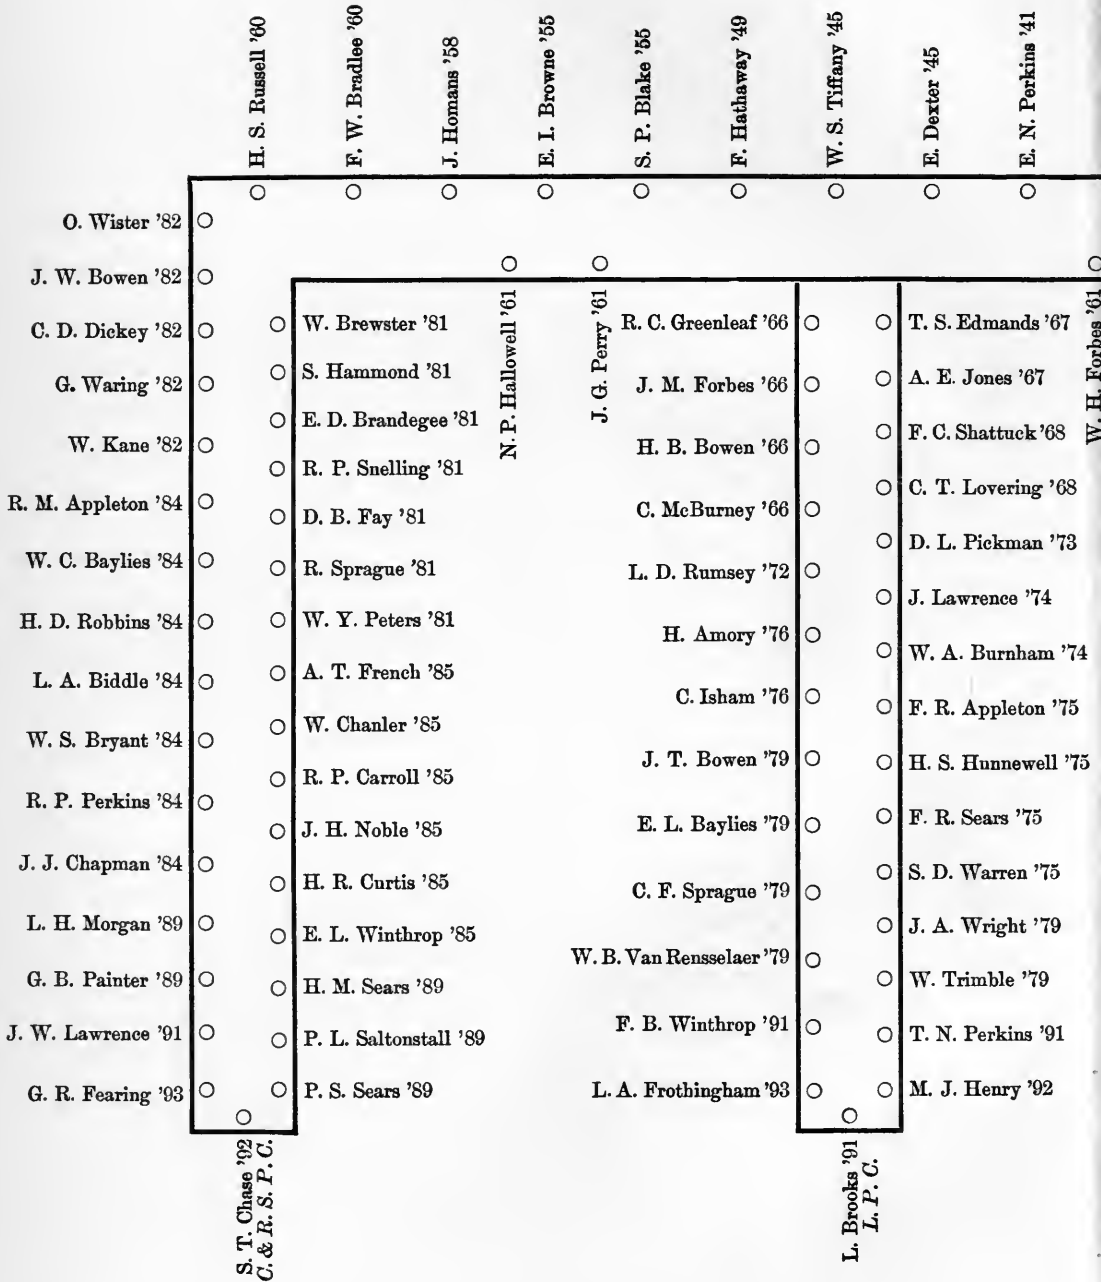

AT a little after seven o'clock the Brothers all assembled in the large Dining Room for the Annual Dinner, Grand Marshal George B. Shattuck presiding. The Literary Exercises having preceded the Dinner, speeches were not called for during the evening; but the Brothers received with enthusiastic applause speeches from Brother J. L. Carroll, '50, and from Brother W. W. Greenough, '37, who replied to the toast of the "Oldest Living Graduate Present." The following are some of the songs which were given during the evening:—

- | | |
|--|--|
| "The Oldest Living Graduate" . . . | C. F. SPRAGUE, '79 |
| "I never Drink behind the Bar" . . . | R. P. CARROLL, '85 |

| "The Oak and the Ash and the Bonny
Ivy Tree" | R. D. SEARS, '83 |
| "Are you there, Moriarty?" | W. Y. PETERS, '81 |
| "The Dude who Did n't Dance" . . . | G. B. PAINTER, '89 |
| "The little Black Bull came down from the Mountain" | F. W. BRADLEE, '60 |
| The "Club Song" | F. W. BRADLEE, '60 |

The many amusing incidents of the evening and the toasts of the officers of the Club are recorded in full in the Record Book of the Club.

DIAGRAM OF THE TA

The diagram, which is given, shows how the one hundred and fifty-three Brothers present were seated. There are undoubtedly some errors in the arrangement, owing to the fact that at the last moment several Brothers were prevented from coming, while others turned up unexpectedly.

N. B. These names of the residences of Members in the Catalogue have been taken from the old records; and as it has been found impossible to correct them all in conformity with the changes which have since been made, they have been generally suffered to remain as first recorded. This may account for some misstatements in the present residences of members.

Members are urgently requested to notify the librarian of any errors they may discover in the Catalogue.
